A message from AME Managing Director, Trevor Hughes

I wanted to write to you and let you know of some of the exciting things coming up at Asset Management Engineers (AME). We are aware of some movement within the WA asset management industry with a competitor recently going into voluntary administration, so I felt it was important for me to take the time to reassure you that despite the instability others are experiencing, AME is stronger than ever - and here to stay.

So far in 2014, we have enjoyed a significant level of growth within AME, and were also awarded the title of ActionCOACH "Fastest Growing Business" in June 2014.

We have formed a number of strong partnerships with industry organisations, allowing us to provide a broader spectrum of service offerings to our clients. In an Australian-first, AME were recently announced as the only authorised partner of Plant Assessor, the world's most comprehensive plant safety inspection system, which has diversified our asset management capabilities to now include Plant Risk Assessment.

Another partnership we are proud to announce is with a technology partner who is transforming the way inspections are managed and reported. Inspection Toolbox places an emphasis on using a highly flexible, cost effective, paperless solution to manage the complete inspection life cycle in a way that can be integrated with your own existing systems.

Our resident NDT specialists, Wayne Carter and Ann Jalava, have recently launched AME's Ball Stud Testing procedure - a non-destructive ultrasonic examination used to identify any cracking that may have developed during the operation of your machine. Our technical experts can tailor the process to suit your current planned scheduled maintenance and minimise downtime.

We have also expanded our team, welcoming Steve Stedman onboard as our latest Asset Management Consultant. Steve brings to AME over 25 years experience as a Business Manager, with a technical trade and electrical background and strong B2B experience within the commercial, industrial, wholesale and government sectors.

At AME, we are committed to investing in the development of products, services, procedures and training that will benefit you – our valued clients. With the support of a stable and dedicated Senior Management Team, AME prides ourselves on our excellent reputation as a strong, reliable, quality focussed company - and we're here to stay.

For more information or to speak with one of our team please phone (08) 9466 7444.

Regards,

Trevor Hughes - Director
